SUMMARY

Many online courses promise quick success in starting a multi-million dollar social media marketing agency, but often the sellers are individuals who have failed at their own agencies and are now profiting from teaching others. While investing in education is important, it's crucial to learn from experienced professionals rather than those selling misleading courses.

- Beware of online courses that promise quick riches in social media marketing.
- Many course sellers have failed at running their own agencies and resort to teaching others.
- Genuine education is valuable, but ensure the source has real experience and success.
- Avoid buying high-ticket services from those without proven results or case studies.
- Focus on building a strong foundation of skills before launching your own agency.
- Success in business takes time and effort; shortcuts often lead to failure.
- Invest in your education wisely to ensure you're learning from credible sources.

stop buying fake horses so many people on the internet try and sell you their courses to why you can start a multi-million dollar social media marketing agency become this Rich crazy guy who makes a ton of money online look at my cars look at these girls it's fake if the agency game was so much fun and it was so awesome these people wouldn't be selling you their course on how to grow an agency they'd be growing their own agency agencies are a profitable business and you can have freedom in an agency but the people selling you these courses don't know what I'm talking about they tried to start an agency failed and then started selling courses online to make more money it's totally cool to buy courses from people that are actually experienced and in fact investing in your education and leveling up is a big deal you should do that I highly recommend you always continue
