SUMMARY

Julianne Idelman shares her personal journey of parenting, highlighting the unexpected challenges she faced as an older parent despite her preparation. She emphasizes the transformative impact of "Parenting by Connection" tools, which she believes should be introduced to parents from the very start of their parenting journey.

- Parenting can be more challenging than anticipated, even with preparation.
- Idelman felt unprepared for the realities of caring for an infant.
- The turning point in her parenting experience came when she discovered "Parenting by Connection" tools.
- She aims to share these tools to help other parents feel more confident and connected.
- The series of videos is designed to introduce these parenting strategies to new parents.
- Idelman advocates for early education on these tools to support parents from the moment their child is born.

hi everybody I'm Julianne idelman and I'm here to tell you about parenting my connection I'm doing that because parenting for me was way harder than I imagined it was going to be I was an older parent I thought I was prepared I'd read all the books I went to all the birthday classes nothing prepared me for what it was going to be like to be home with an infant and to be responsible for this new life and not know what to do it wasn't until I discovered the tools of parenting by connection that I really started to feel good about being a parent my daughter was a year and a half old and I would like every parent everywhere to know these tools from the very moment your baby is in your arms and that's why I created this series of videos to introduce you to Parenting by connection and how those tools might be helpful at your house
