SUMMARY

Anand Kumar, known for his Super 30 initiative, discusses the challenges parents face in motivating their children to work hard and achieve well-rounded development. He emphasizes the importance of adapting parenting approaches to contemporary circumstances and children's aspirations.

- Parents often use their past struggles as motivation for their children.*
- The changing times and children's desires require a shift in parenting strategies.*
- Guiding children based on their passions and interests can enhance motivation.*
- Traditional methods of pressure and comparison may lead to resistance from children.*
- Building a friendly and playful relationship can foster better communication and understanding.*
- Effective parenting involves maintaining a dialogue in the child's language and context.*
